The workspace The window that contains all the Photoshop image areas or windows is called the workspace. The workspace is the general area for window layout and editing. All the tools you need to do your editing tasks are within the workspace. The three main area segments in the workspace are the workspace canvas, the tools palettes, and the options palette. You start and create each new image within the workspace. After you start the Photoshop editing process, there are a number of ways you can add items to the workspace:

- Choose Window⇒Workspace, or choose Window⇒New Workspace from the Photoshop menu.
- Choose Photoshop⇒Window⇒Workspace.
- If you have an active image loaded in the Layers panel (refer to Figure 1-1 earlier in this chapter), you can double-click the image thumbnail in the Layers panel to display the image in the workspace. Keep an eye on the Layers panel while you work because it gives you real-time updates of your editing changes. If you have multiple images loaded at once on your screen, make sure that you're working on the correct image by selecting it with a mouse click. Click the button with the arrow in the image to select the correct image.

* * * # Selecting which image to edit The first thing you do when you create a new image in Photoshop is select the image you want to use. The way to select the image you want to work on is to click the image thumbnail in the Layers panel (refer to Figure 1-1). The image that you select in the Layers panel becomes the current image that you're working on. If you then edit the image in the workspace, any changes you make to the current image are immediately reflected on the image that you selected in the Layers panel. This is called the active image. If you want to select a different image for the current active image, press the Filter Swatches In Photoshop, elements that are used in many different places can be saved and reused. In Photoshop Elements, you can save more options by creating filter swatches. You can apply more than one color to a swatch, create more than one swatch for one color and then create a new swatch to use in another place. For example, you can save a swatch of all orange in red so you can quickly apply that color all over the art without having to undo and rework your art. Grant Residence Grant Residence is a heritage-listed residence located at 35-37 Mackay Road, in the Sydney suburb of Ryde, New South Wales, in the Randwick Local Environment Plan area. It was added to the New South Wales State Heritage Register on 2 April 1999. History This grand garden home was built for young Grant Burness, son of the Maitland farmer and merchant, Sir John Burness. It is now owned by the Roman Catholic Church and is used by the Ryde and Parramatta Diocesan Boards. The residence was not commissioned by James Barnet who demolished the Barnet Homestead at the end of the nineteenth century. Description This residence is a large, two-storeyed, Federation Queen Anne style house, with views of the city and ocean. A beautiful garden surrounds the house. The rear garden is now used for recreation and has a sports court in the centre of the garden. A large tennis court is located in the front garden. The house is now in an excellent state of preservation and retains original features. The house has a stone/concrete verandah, a stone fireplace at the entry foyer and a cement tiled roof. Condition As at 5 April 2013, Archaeology Assessment Report Condition: Major, Archaeology Recovery Site Modifications and dates Early 1950s and 1960s - See: Additions to the Grant Residence at the University of NSW Art Collection website Early mid-1970s - See: Additions to the Grant Residence at the University of NSW Art Collection website 1992 - Building is subject to a heritage listing. 2013 - Building was subject to a conservation management assessment. Heritage listing As at 6 March 2011, Grant Residence is of State heritage significance as it is rare in the central coastal area as a large residence of c. 1880s residence of an important early settler and prominent member of Sydney society. The Grant Residence is a large, two storeyed, Federation Queen Anne style house built and on an important early settler and prominent member of Sydney society. It is the largest of several buildings in the Ryde area built by prominent Irish immigrant architects J F Burness and William Francis Dargie, the work of an Irish immigrant architect after the depression of the late 1870s. The Grant Residence is one of only two large houses that survive in Ryde from the original

Kilgett's Patrick Scrimgeour returns home after a season in Spain Assistant goalkeeping coach Patrick Scrimgeour, who was called up to the full England squad earlier this month, has spent a productive season in Spain. The 28-year-old, who has recently returned to Rugby Football League headquarters, has been able to catch up with his family in Western Australia, but has also seen first-hand how the Spanish game is developing. "It was good coming back and meeting up with all the family. The players have been really good at home, they've been good to me and all around, so it's been good to get back here and get back playing," Scrimgeour said. "Obviously before, I wasn't able to take time off like that, but here I have. "It's been great to come back here and see how the game is developing in that area [Spain], and see how it has been growing for a few years now. It's been amazing – and good to go there and see all the new things going on. "Before I went there, it didn't really cross my mind that I was going to stay there, because I just wanted to be here. It's pretty normal in that part of the world. I went there with good intentions and the expectation to stay for a year but it all went really well. They've welcomed me back so well, and it was one of those things where you don't want to leave. "I enjoy it, I enjoy the players, I enjoy the coaches, it's just a great family atmosphere – so I'll definitely be back in that part of the world next year." Scrimgeour has been overwhelmed by the response he has received since going on trial with the England setup this month. "It's been hectic. It was hectic when I went away because I didn't know if it was even going to happen. I was just hoping it would happen for a long time before I went to Spain, but I'm happy that it has," he said. "It was nice to see the reaction that I got when I came back here [RFL headquarters], and the schoolboys here and the coaches have been really good and I've had a good reaction from that
