This should fix it. In the future, you might want to place the map folder in the root of your drive, not in your Documents folder. Injure your car? Seldom get charged enough to cover it ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (KRQE) - New Car, New Problems Did you know your insurance rates could change five days after you purchased a new vehicle? "Because of an insurance law that we have that changes what the premium would be, we have customers call and are not receiving the correct premium because of this law," says James Wilson of Wilson Insurance Service. James Wilson is the owner of the agency Wilson Insurance Service, as well as the chief underwriter for the company. Wilson says his clients' insurance policy rates could be immediately changed after October 13, 2016 if their prior year vehicle is a new model-year vehicle. "And the reason for that is they have not fully processed every year's fleet in the previous year," he says. "Our prior year fleet was 2015, and New Mexico does not have a rule for how many vehicles they should have ready. So, from October 13th through December, if they didn't have some of the vehicles ready, we don't issue them the audit forms. And they'll go under 2013 until it's completed and they've issued a new quote." Wendy Delgado with Idaho Fair Insurance is dealing with a client who has just purchased a new 2017 Toyota Corolla that came from being wrecked. Her new car used to be a 2007 Toyota Corolla. "Typically, when they make that type of new vehicle purchase, we give them a quote for their new vehicle and then they sign it and it's in the mail. Four days later we get the forms back with the rate changes," says Delgado. "The rate is just not reflective of the new vehicle because it doesn't take into consideration the total mileage we've put on the car," said Wilson. Under this "lack" of processing, the rates you were quoted when you first bought your car could go up to 50 percent higher depending on the new year's ratio of new vehicles to audited years.
