What can a sports fantasy do for business? For those in the social industry, the answer may come in the form of fantasy sports. Industry giants (i.e., DraftKings, FanDuel, and Yahoo Sports Fantasy) have been growing their combined sports fantasy subscriber base to between 20 million and 30 million subscribers annually. This is what we mean when we say fantasy sport is HUGE. As these giants continue to grow and introduce new features, the number of fantasy sport users will continue to rise. So what exactly is a fantasy sport and why is it so popular? Well, let's face it, until now, none of us have ever been interested in any kind of sports. Sure, some of us may be fanatic about golf, a little passionate about soccer, and play tennis on occasion (we're certainly not the only ones - Yahoo! Sports Fantasy is the most played fantasy sports game around), but sport wasn't really a "passion." Neither of the sports we mentioned provided for any kind of personal satisfaction or enjoyment. We can't go "behind enemy lines" to see the game played. There are no highlights to watch. It's just a sports event. It is what it is. However, Fantasy Sports gives us the ability to become "sports junkies." Even after a big win, losing in the next game becomes a reward in itself. Even after a loss, our virtual sports teams may be so close to victory that we cannot help but stand up and cheer. We become so invested in the team that it is hard to stop playing. We also learn to become better fans. Every season, we learn new things about a sport, and try to predict the future. We track statistics and discuss strategies. We learn to become a fan, which we really cannot do with other sports, or other non-sport activities. We now have better control over the outcome of our favorite team. And what does that mean for business
