Link: A: It looks like the website your contacting is back up. The link will function as expected.
SEDE is a Stack Exchange Database that has been copied into the internet, and is operated by Stack Exchange. There is a program that runs from the internet called SEDE Executable that can be downloaded and run.

The file is called SEDE_Executable.exe and it is located in the same folder as Stack Exchange Data Explorer (SEDE). After clicking this link, the message 'chrome not yet ready' will show. After a few seconds it will disappear and the screen will show the download link for you to download. Note that the download link is not a crack. It is meant to be run in IE 8 and above. It is a link to the SEDE site where you can download the executable. Stack Exchange has deprecated all the cracks etc for the SEDE site. This site has not been available in a long time. This site is supported by stack exchange, so a crack is not needed. This is a list of data dumps. The first column, Dump*, lists the dump number, as they are released. The second column, Dumplink, is the Internet address that led to the dump. The third and fourth columns are usernames and email addresses that will grant you access to the dumps. The fifth and sixth columns show the dates of the dumps. The seventh column is the file size. The last column, Retina, shows the resolution of the uploads. The dump series is produced by a script that runs every day and creates a new dump file. 6d1f23a050
